A Great Gathering of the Grangers. Seven Thousand Picnickers at Whitmore Lake Last Saturday.

A GRAND ADDRESS BY GOV. LUCE Picnic Paragraphs-Why the Picnic Peo ple Waited Till the Shadows

Longer Grew. "How many people are here to-day?" "Where did they all come from?" were questions many times repeated at Whitmore Lake last Saturday, the occasion of the Farmers' Basket Picnic, and they were questions not easy to correctly answer. There were not less than seven thousand people present, that estimate being the lowest we heard given, other estimates running from thirteen thousand, down; and they principally came from Washtenaw, Wayne. Oakland and Livingstone counties, but many other counties of the southern and central portions of the state were represented. This was the ninth annual picnic under the auspices of the counties named, and it was said by all to have been the most enjoyable and successful. This annual meeting of the farmers at Whitmore Lake grew out of annual grange picnics, first inaugurated by the Northfield grange. then extended to other granges in Washtenaw and adjoining counties, and finally so broadened and widened in its purpose of pleasure and profit, that the members of the Farmers' Basket Pienic Association were understood to embrace all the farmers of the four counties named and as many from other counties as could attend.

The forenoon of the great picnic day was spent by the multitude in getting there, and the brief invitation that slang parlance addresses to Mr. Eli on that subject was evidently not needed in this case; and indeed, it might be observed, that owing to the thoughtfulness of the railroad, which consideration is referred to elsewhere, the further suggestion in the Eli philoso phy, to stay there, was also rendered

That feature of the day's observance from which it derived its name, basket picnic, came first on the official program, and it is perhaps unnecessary to say that it was generally observed and heartily enjoyed. It was a pretty sight to see the many hundreds of little groups under the apple trees during the dinner hour; and it was a sight to which distance lent no enchantment, the best point of view being from behind the vertebra of a deceased but not lamented fowl, or a generous section of that splendid product of civil ization and culture in cooking, the ap

The musical and oratorical part of the program began at one o'clock and were concluded before four. Hon. Wm. Ball, of Hamburg, a sharp-eved, pleasant gentleman, President of the Association, announced the formal opening of the exercises and called for the selection of officers for the next year, the names of whom are given elsewhere.

The election of officers having concluded, a piano duet was given by Miss Julia A. Ball of Hamburg, and Elsie Cranson of Webster. The young ladies were performers of unusual ability, and the effect of the sweet sound waves as they joined the breeze that played among the overhanging limbs and leaevs of the old trees that formed the grove, was beautiful beyond the powers of the mere vibrations of the wires

Prayer was then offered by Rev. S. W. Burd, of Whitmore Lake, a brightlooking little man, who had more the appearance of a sbrewd lawyer than of a minister; by which observation we mean no disrespect to the reverend Miss Julia A. Ball and her brother. E. M. Ball, then gave a vocal duet, the burden of which was a very sweettoned invitation to "Come to the Woodland," and it may not be out of place to here remark that we are perfectly willing to go to the woodland or any where else, whenever we can be assured that singing such as was given by Miss Ball and her brother will be provided.

President Ball then referred to the fact that his name was on the program for an address, but he disclaimed any purpose or desire to make a speech. He referred to the pleasant features of the farmers' annual picnic, and congratulated the assembled throng that circumstances had permitted their presence. The President concluded his remarks with a very happy introduction of the principal speaker of the day,

We are not prepared to give the Governor's address in full, and it is due as follows: him to say that any partial report or review of it will hardly fail of being unjust and unworthy of its purpose. The character and tone of the address were a surprise to all who then heard the Governor for the first time and a source of pleasure and pride to all his large audience. We had before regarded Gov. Luce as an intelligent, progressive farmer, a man of integrity and ability in the lines of his life's duty and labor, but we were hardly prepared for the wide and broad knowledge of science and literature, poetry and history and the other lines of learning represented at the picnic. Normal Building Plans Adopted.

The State Board of Education yesterday held a meeting in Detroit and agreed upon plans for the new Normal building-two wings each 80x100 feet, about $3,500. one on the north and one on the south of the present building, to be constructed of brick and stone. Details are not vet obtainable.

LUMBER FROM THE SOUTH.-Mr. S. W. Parsons has lately received at his yard a carload of whitewood lumber third cottage just north of the two from central Kentucky. SCHOOL ELECTION. - The annual school election, at which two trustees will be chosen to succeed Clark Cornwell and L. A. Barnes, will occur Monday, Sept. 5, commencing at 8 o'clock and closing at 4, standard time. We have heard no names of candidates announced, but have been informed that Mr. Cornwell will not accept a reëlection. The annual school meeting will be held in the evening of the same day, in high school hall. Both the election and the meeting should be well attended by the taxpayers of the city and the patrons of the schools.

A SUGGESTION.—If it be not too late the corner stone of the new electric light edifice with suitable ceremonies. As a proper program, we would have an opening hymn, to be given out and on the cultivation of concord and brotherly love by Ald. Follmor; a congratplatory address on the location of the building, by Ald. Goldsmith, and a collection taken up by Ald. Kirk. It might also be the proper thing to file away in the stone a copy of the remonstrance against investing in electric lights, the Mayor's veto of the contract accepted, the result of the vote on the waterworks proposition, and other evidences of the harmonious manner in Aug 16. The remains were brought which the progress of the present epoch in our city's history is being achieved.

The canvas-covered circular swing recently located for a time in the fifth ward here, one of the managers of which was nearly killed while here, through a combination of rock, force, and a bad Ypsilanti man, is now located at Ann Arbor and is proving a disturbing element in high society circles there. In the University town, however, the patrons of the swing reverse the Ypsilanti plan, by playfully blacking the eyes and breaking the noses of each other, instead of trying to kill off

A style of psalmody that may please me may displease you. Some would like to have a minister in gown and bands and surplice, and others prefer to have a minister in plain citizen's apparel. Some are most impressed when a little child is presented at the altar and sprinkled of the waters of a holy benediction "in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost:" and others are more impressed when the penitent comes up out of the river, his garments dripping with the waters of a baptism which signifie the washing away of sin. Let either have his own way. One man likes no noise in prayer, not a word, not a whisper. Another man, just as good, prefers by gesticulation and exclamation to express his devotional aspira-

George, give me thy

In tracing out the religion of sectarianism or bigotry, I find that a great deal of it comes from wrong education in the home circle. There are parents who do not think it wrong to caricature and jeer the peculiar forms of religion in the world, and denounce other sects and other denominations. It is very often the case that that kind of education acts opposite to what it is expected, and the children grow up, and, after a while, go and see for themselves; and looking into those churches. and finding that the people are good there, and they love God and keep his commandments, by natural reaction they go and join those very churches I could mention the names of prominent ministers of the Gospel who spent their whole life bombarding other denominations and who lived to see their children preach the Gospel in those very denominations. But it is often the case that bigotry starts in a household, and that the subject of it never recovers. There are tens of thousands of bigots 10 years old.

I go out sometimes in the summer, and I find two beehives, and these two beehives are in a quarrel. I come near enough, not to be stung, but I come just near enough to hear the controversy, and one beehive says: "That field of clover is the sweetest," and the other beehive says: "This field of clover is the sweetest." Book-Making.

Lew Vanderpoele in the Writer reproduces what celebrated novelists told im concerning their methods

"Making books," said Charles Dickens, "is very much like building houses; and the author is a more or less happy combination of architect and carpenter. There must not only be the appreciation of material, and power to arrange it consistently, but there must, also, for good results, be unqualified sympathy between the author and his subject. No man ever wrote anything artistically, praise-worthy on any subject with which he was not in tune. What critic, glaneing at the outside of an unlabeled box of goods, would assume to guess out the secret of its contents? I doubt if the veariest egotist, suddenly running upon a new and unknown species of tree, would attempt telling you the color of the wood without scraping away the bark. If he did, he would be doing exactly what critics do when, judging simply from his book, they tell you that between an author's master-piece and himself there is only antagonism.

"Reviewers," remarked Lord Lytton, "have been strangely misled in one respect in passing judgment upon my novels: declaring, as they all do, that I never have in any way drawn upon my own personality. No one, in reality, has ever done this to a greater extent than I have. Never have I written a novel or drama in which did not incorporate the greater part of my views and emotions as I felt them at the time. Since I am neuer in the same intellectual poise for two consecutive months, this system of filling in my stories by drawing upon my own personality direct enables me to seem versatile, so far as treatment goes in a way which is, in results, quite as novel genius on earth."

Charles Reade after displaying his "I noticed it," replied Judge Persimmon. "Well, old Cy Weathersby, out stand all of this better when I have scrap-books said: "You will undergiven you an idea of my book-makingng views. Most authors, so I think deal too much with idealism all the way through; I believe that writing a novel is just as material a piece of work as writing a dictionary. All avaliable stuff, which you think there possibility of your using, should first be gathered, sorted, and classified. Then this matter ought to be read and reread until you are thoroughly familiar with it. This done, the time is ripe for the only part of your novel which is altogether ideal—the selection of your plot. In this you can unbridle your imagination and let it play in any or all directions it may choose. Your plot once selected, you must study it and woo it and caress it as you would any coy girl upon whom your heart might be set. When once she is entirely yours treat her as a tradesman treats his newly won bride—set her to work. Then the ideal part is all over with and dead earnest begins. You fit facts-generally hard ones, as most facts are—to the various parts of your plot, until that romantic maiden becomes, by contact with matter-of-fact things matter-of-fact herself. If you let her keep too much of her oldtime romance you spoil the book. If you leave too little of it and make your eombination all matter-of-fact you surpass your age and do a novel which will be read years and years after you become worm-meat.

low the average. houses on the bluff, in front of the Howland, a youngish-looking man sat this morning peering through an opera-glass directed at a group of girls in bathing. He wore a suit of white serge, with a dark gray flannel shirt tied loosely with a sailor knot, a straw hat, and around his waist was a wide cloth belt that had a lot of gold cording on it. I was told that it was some sort of a Chinese scarf. There was a blase air of unconcern about him, as if he had seen everything worth seeing in the world, and was only studying the specimens of feminine anatomy before him because e had nothing else to do. He was looking through a powerful set of lenses though, for an acquaintance, to whom he condescendingly suggested a trial, assured me that he could easily see the very stitching in the bathing suits. "I would not have come down here," said the young man with the lorgnets, 'if I had not remembered that the prettiest forms I saw anywhere last summer were here. It's really the only pleasure I have," he added, adjusting the glasses at a rather plump girl in a white fiannel bathing

"By Joe, she's a stunner," he exclaimed, after giving her a thorough inspection through the glasses. Then, peering at her again, he said, in a tone of disappointment, "Ah, but she's wearing stays." All unconscious of the fact that every move that they made was being watched and commented on, the girls jumped and romped around in the surf, but the tired young man kept on in his peculiar occupation. He is at it every morning, I am told. No one knows how he spends the rest of his time. He has seen everything, been everywhere, and there is a constant look of ennui and depression on his face as if he thought that life were scarcely worth living. He is a queer individual and he follows a strange pursuit. It is tasting tea. He samples tea for half a dozen of the biggest houses in the county and earns about $25,000 a year by it. He has the reputation of knowing more about teas than any one else in the country. It is at the sacrifice of his stomach and good digestion that he has earned the reputation, for both are ruined though he is still a young man. The only thing that he really enjoys in the way of nourishment is a cup of tea that he brews himself ever morning. The Russians are a nation of teadrinkers; coffee is rare; tea is universal, drink it at all hours, and without regard to quantity-sometimes ten cups at a sitting, and yet, apparently, with impunity. Brass urns, in which tea-water is boiled by means of a charcoal fire, are found over all the empire. They are called samovars, and I found it important to include in my Russian vocabulary the word "samovar." Their method of making and drinking tea has been noticed by all travelers in their country.

She was picked up at 4 a. m. just outside the Hook by the tug Wendel Goodwin just as a little breeze struck her. When she was sighted from the tug she was in a dead calm, and the watchers on the tug had a good chance to see how easily she started, how swiftly she sailed under her sea rig in the light air, and with how little commotion of the water she slipped through the waves. As the Thistle came up the bay through the morning haze she was met in the Narrows by the health officers, tug. A moment sufficed to pass her and she was boarded by a reporter in a small boat. The captain smiled broadly and talked with equal broadness, when congratulated on his run and the excellent showing made by the boat and crew. Then he led the reporter below, where Captain Donald Kerr, navigating master, was writing his log down to date. A hasty glance over the well kept record showed that the best day's run was 247 miles, and even on that day the skipper and navigator were not satisfied with the weather. He thought he saw a prize fight-ers' ring, and in the middle of it stood a doughty little champion who met and deliberately knocked over, one by one, a score or more of big, burly looking fellows, as they advanced to the attack. Giants as they were in size, the valiant pigmy proved more than a match for them. It was all so furny that Jenks woke up laughing. Mrs. Ida M. Strong, of Ainsworth, Ind., writes:
"My little boy had been troubled with hip-joint disease for two years. When he commenced the use of your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets,' he was confined to his bed, and could not be moved without suffering great pain. But now, thanks to your 'Discovery,' he is able to be up all the time, and can walk with the help of crutches. He does not suffer any pain, and can eat and sleep as well as any one. It has only been about three months since he commenced using your medicine. I cannot find words with which to express my gratitude for the benefit he has received through you."

Mrs. Martha Owen, of Carthage, Jasper Co., Mo., writes: "I was treated for several years by some of the best physicians for consumption without receiving any benefit. Soon after I commenced taking Prescription all the symptoms of consumption vanished. I wish also to report the cure of one of my neighbors who was a great sufferer from womb disease, and was permanently cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription."

CARRIE S. STOWELL, Postmistress at Magnolia, Colorado, writes: "I feel that I cannot say too much in praise of your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' for I have found that it is of golden worth. I has helped both my husband and myself. Two years ago Mr. Stowell was afflicted with what appeared to be asthma, and our altitude being so high, the difficulty in breathing attendant upon this distressing malady was greatly increased. But he began to improve at once after commencing the use of your 'Discovery,' and was entirely cured by this wonderful medicine. As for myself, I have used it for nervous and general debility, and for an affection of the kidneys and bladder, and I found that it was without a rival for these complaints. We are now never without your 'Discovery.'"

Mrs. W. H. NICKLIN, of Mariborough, N. Y., says: "When I first began taking your 'Favorite Prescription,' 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and 'Pellets,' I was so weak I could not be on my feet but a few minutes at a time. They did me a great deal of good, and I take pleasure in expressing my gratitude to you for the excellent health I now of consumption."

The ly to ratify their own schemes, wouldn't they? and a very thinly-disguised democratic scheme is that. Disappointed in their efforts to overthrow the republicans of Iowa and the prohibition laws by open alliance with revolted republicans, they now devise this scheme which, sailing under the name of republican and professing devotion to all other republican principles in Iowa, is expected to create sufficient schism to enable them to capture the state and reverse its policy. Will the prohibition party now assist that? St. John announces that "we are fighting the republican party now." This is his golden opportunity, then, but will he receive any following outside of the democratic and anti-prohibition ranks? The success in forming and recruiting the third party in Iowa will show, and we shall see.

THE Sun strangely misunderstands the sentiment of the great majority of the American people if it thinks that they will endorse a policy which takes the taxes off from whisky and tobacco and leaves them on clohhing, sugar, iron, copper, coal and all the other thousand and one articles of prime necessity. The party that would be so foolhardy as to declare itself in favor of such a policy would be mighty short-lived.—Lansing Journal.

is the Journal's way of referring to the tariff. We don't care about that now, but want to say that the proposal to abolish the internal revenue tax upon whisky meets our approval, regardless of any possible effect it may have upon tariff. As a temperance measure, we favor it. Never was the liquor interest one-half so strong before the "war tax" was laid upon it, as it has been every year since. Never before could it have at all resisted the popular sentiment against it which it now resists. THE Syracuse Daily Standard of July i, in speaking of the casualties of the 4th in that city, characterized the barbaric taste of Americans in such celebrations a passion for "noise and stink." The enormous folly thus criticised is freshly illustrated by shocking casualties at a soldiers' reunion at Enfield, Ill., last Friday, at which two premature cannon discharges laid out six mangled and bleeding victims, some of them mortally injured and all maimed for life. At a soldier's reunion in Muskegon county, last Thursday, a Michigan veteran was mangled in the same way and is dying. Oh, men of sense, does it pay!

A CALL has been issued for a national convention to organize the new American party, to meet in Philadelphia, Sept. 16 and 17. The call specifies the objects of the move, enumerating-the restriction of immigration; a thorough revision of the naturalization laws; reserving American lands for American citizens only; to restsict and guard the right of elective franchise; to abolish polygamy in the United States immediately and entirely; to enact and enforce such laws as will tend to eradicate intemperance; to develop the resources of the country by a wise system of internal improvements; to protect and promote the American system of free common schools; to adjust the relations between labor and capital on a permanent basis of equity and justice.

WHEN DAYS ARE FINE.

Beloved one, when days are fine
I sadly pine
To see again thy happy face,
Whose bright sunshine
Brought ever joy and left no trace
Of doleful gloom
In any room
Whose presence the u did'st choose to grace

Dear heart, who made life blithe and gay
Whenever near,
Thou now, alas! art far away,
And I am here—
To sigh alone and contemplate
O'er cruel fate,
Which swept our paths in life apart,
For oceans wide
Do now divide
From me the dear one of my heart.

No longer with their merry glance,
Those eyes of thine
Look into mine —
Those eyes on which the sunbeams dance.

When days are fine, beloved one, I long for thee
To share with me
The beauties of earth, air, and sea;
When days are drear
If thou wert near
No longer dull would nature be.

THE DEAD YEAR.

JEAN INGELOW.

On her bier
Quiet lay the buried year;
I sat down where I could see
Life without, and sunshine free—
Death within. And I between,
Waited my own heart to wean
From the shroud that shaded her
In the rock-hewn sepulcher;
Waited till the dead should say,
"Heart, be free of me this day"—
Waited with a patient will—
And I wait between them still.

THE GRAVES OF THE HEART.

There is in every heart a grave;
A secret, holy spot,
Filled with the memory of some
This busy life knows not.

Low down and deeply dug they lie, These cherished graves unseen, And years of blighting care that pass, Make not those graves less green. With jealous love we keep them fresh

Through many wintry years; And when the world believes us gay, We water them with tears. Not for one cause, alike, do all

Their secret sorrow bear; Perchance some mourn a living death— Yet still a grave is there.

Oh! there are things within this life, Which strangely, deeply thrill— In music's softest, sweetest notes, 'We hear a voice long still!

We deem the act a wanton one, Upon a grave to tread; We pass in silent reverence The resting of the dead: Then on the secret, hidden spot, Let us not press too near; Remembering that to every heart. Its secret grave is dear.

LOVE DIVINE.

Love divine, all love excelling—
Joy of heaven, to earth come down!
Fix in us thy humble dwelling,
All thy faithful mercies crown:
Jesus! thou art all compassion,
Pure, unbounded love thou art;
Visit us with thy salvation,
Enter ever trembling heart.

Breathe, oh, breathe thy loving Spirit Into every troubled breast!
Let us all in thee inherit,
Let us find the promised rest:
Come, Almighty to deliver,
Let us all thy life receive!
Speedily return, and peyer.

Speedily return, and never, Never more thy temples leave! Finish then thy new creation, Pure, unspotted may we be:
Let us see our whole salvation
Perfectly secured by thee!
Changed from glory into glory,
Till in heaven we take our place;
Till we cast our crowns before thee,
Lost in wonder, love, and praise.

Ayer's Hair Vigor keeps the hair soft and pliant, imparts to it the lustre and freshness of youth, causes it to grow luxuriantly, eradicates Dandruff, cures all scalp diseases, and is the most cleanly of all hair preparations.

AYER'S Hair Vigor has given me perfect satisfaction. I was nearly bald for six years, during which time I used many hair preparations, but without success. Indeed, what little hair I had, was growing thinner, until I tried Ayer's Hair Vigor. I used two bottles of the Vigor, and my head is now well covered with a new growth of hair.

HAIR that has become weak, gray, and faded, may have new life and color restored to it by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. **My hair was thin, faded, and dry, and fell out in large quantities. Ayer's Hair Vigor stopped the falling, and restored my hair to its original color. As a dressing for the hair, this preparation has no equal.—Mary N. Hammond, Stillwater, Minn.

VIGOR, youth, and beauty, in the appearance of the hair, may be preserved for an indefinite period by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. **A disease of the scalp caused my hair to become harsh and dry, and to fall out freely. Nothing I tried seemed to do any good until I commenced using Ayer's Hair Vigor. Three bottles of this preparation restored my hair to a healthy condition, and it is now soft and pliant. My scalp is cured, and it and pliant. My scalp is cured, and it is also free from dandruff.—Mrs. E. R. Foss, Milwaukee, Wis.

An old Mormon romance appears to have been revived by The Globe Democrat, as shown by a recent St. Louis dispatch. The story is to the effect that some time about the year 1842 Joseph Smith became enamored of an English maiden of a wealthy family who had espoused the Mormon faith. That was about the time Smith was said to have received a revelation sanctioning and recommending polygamy. The prophet wished to take the girl as his spiritual wife, to which she consented on condition that if she bore a son he should in the fullness of time, become the head of the Mormon church. The contract was entered into, and the son was born and educated by the mother in England to fit him for the high position for which he was destined. He is now said to be about 45 years of age, and likely to appear as a competitor for the vacant presidency. There may be some groundwork for the story, but even were the story true the Englishman would stan! little chance of becoming Taylor's successor. The head of the Mormon church is elected by the chief and captured the murderer. elders, and is not a hereditary office.

There are none but colored troops was buried under it. Fortunately, there there, for whom the Indians have the ut most contempt. General West is urging the Governor to forward troops at once, and one company of cavalry left Denver for Gypsam by rail within twenty miles of Glenwood Springs. Cavalry from Asen, Colorado Springs, Canon City and Leadville have also been ordered to get to Henwood Springs as quickly as possible. These troops have orders to assist the Sheriff in serving his warrants, but as the Indians are inclined to resist this with force of arms, it is equivalent to a declaration of war against Colorow's band.

Governor Adams telegraphed General Crook, at Omaha, that the situation is serious, and he urged that steps be taken by the War Department to protect settlers, and arms and ammunition were shipped in quantity from here for Meeker. Much apprehension is felt for State Senator Eddy, who is on his ranch in the disturbed district. Late advices confirm the report of a skirmish between Sheriff Kendall and the Indians, in which four of the latter were hit. One full company of infantry will be sent to Meeker at once to protect the women and children, and their presence will relieve the sattlers who will doubtless be enrolled as State troops and re-enforce the Sheriff's party.

Reports from the front are very meager, as the telegraph lines are down. Several skirmishes have taken place, and the casualties so far are three Indians wounded and one killed. The horse of one of the Sheriff's party was killed in the skirmish. All the settlements of Northwestern Colorado are aroused and arming, and small parties are going out after the Indians, who are making for the high mountains. Settlers have made no call for assistance from the government, as, now that hostilities have broken out, they seem determined to settle the question for themselves for all time. Unity in Speaking.

The old dramatists wrote with marked respect for the "Three Unities" time, place, and plot. They subordinated metaphors, speeches, action, and scenes to the one purpose of making a single, distinct impression. The orations of Demosthenes and Cicero, good boy." the funeral discourses of Bourdaloue and Massillon, and the speeches of Chatham and Webster are marked by a similar singleness of aim. These orators always used rhetoric as a servant, and never permitted it to appear as a master, intent upon showing off enfeebled the sermon. Once while Haydon, the English artist, who delighted to paint on a large canvas, was waiting for the coach at a village, a countryman said to him, "I beg your pardon, sir, but are you the great painter?"

"Well, I don't know about that exactly," answered Haydon. "But, sir, did you paint the picture

The Power of the Whale.

If the whale knew its own power, he could easily destroy all the machinery which the art of man could devise for catching him, and it wou'd only be necessary for him to swim in a straight ine on the surface in order to break the thickest rope, but instead, on being struck with a harpoon, he obeys a natural instinct, which, in this instance, betrays him to his death. Sir Humphrey Davy in his "Salmonia," observes that a whale not having an air bladder can sink in the lowest depths of the ocean, and mistaking the harpoon for the sword of a swordfish or the teeth of a shark, he instantly descends, this being his manner of freeing himself "But where will you find another from these enemies, who cannot bear hiding-place?" she asked, gazing at the pressure of a deep ocean; and from him with great sad eyes. "Your arm ascending and descending in a small is not yet well, and who would be with space, he thus puts himself in the power of the whaler. If I can sunk to a great depth, all that is porlift my name from the accusation ous is penetrated with water, or is greatly compressed. Scoresby states that when, by entangling the line of the harpoon, a boat was carried down by a whale, it required, after the boat was recovered, two boats to keep it at the surface. As soon as the whale dives after being wounded, it draws out the line or cord of the harpoon, which is coiled up in the boat, with very considerable velocity. In order, therefore, to prevent any accident from the violence of this motion, which might set the boat on fire, one man is stationed with an axe to cut the rope asunder, if it should become entangled, while another, furnished with a mop, is constantly cooling with water the channel through which it passes.

"Glasses to Read Wif."

It was a warm summer day when Uncle Ephraim Jackson, a worthy colored man, entered an optician's shop, and, removing his tall white hat, and wiping the perspiration from his forelead with a bandanna handkerchief, sat down warily on a revolving a pair of glasses "fer to read wif." "What number do you wear?" asked the optician. Uncle Ephraim grinned. "I guess I wears two," said he.

' Number two!" exclaimed the optician, in astonishment. "Jis' two glasses, sah; one fer de one eye, an' one fer de odder."

The optician looked at him with a frown for an instant, but, seeing that the old man was innocent of any attempt to make a joke, went on with the business before him.

"Try on these," he said, picking out a pair, "and see if you can read the letters on that card over there."

Uncle Ephriam carefully put on the spectacles, and looked eagerly at the Handel.

"Carn't read it. shuah, boss," he said, looking disappointed.
"Well, try these." said the optician,

'No go, boss," said Uncle Ephraim. The dealer gave him another pair, any singers in the place who could and then another. #### Apache Baby Life.

There is an astonishing amount of difference in the endurance shown by savage and civilized folks. Among us babies are treated "as if they might break," as the saying goes; but with the Indians their conditions of life are less finely balanced. Baby life among the Apaches is thus described in the It is cold work handling potatoes after Overland Monthly:

Leaning against wagons and buildings are dozens of little baskets with baby Apaches sucking their fists there-The baskets are of the regular Indian style, and the poor babies are strapped and laced into them tight and snug, nothing showing but the round, chubby face and two tiny fists.

Some squaws hang their baskets to the saddle, because if left standing on the ground, the dogs go round and lick the babies' faces, much to the little ones, discomfort. One rather frisky pony, with a baby on the horn of his saddle wanders from the bunch and is immediately surrounded by a crowd of dogs.

Their barking starts him to trot, and with a shriek the mother rushes from her place in the line to catch him. But the pony doesn't want to be caught, and from a trot turns to a run, and away they go-the basket flapping on his side only making him run the

No one seems sorry for the poor baby, whose yells are drowned in the general burst of laughter that goes up. Finally the strap that holds the basket breaks, down comes poor baby thump, to the ground, face down, and the pony, after running a few more rods, is caught by a boy, while the distracted mother picks up her unfortunate infant, and immediately unlacing the deerskin cover, takes it out to assure herself it is sound in body after

What I'd seen wasn't one big snake at all, but a whole squad of 'em, and they had just twisted round each other like strands of a rope and lay there basking in the sun, on that fence rail.'

Mary Ann's Turn.

A lady, attending a small church in a rural district, tells an amusing story of the manner in which the muical services were conducted. The music attempted by the choir was of a florid and pretentious character, and altogether beyond the abilities of the ambitious singers.

The relation between the pastor and the congreation was evidently of the simplest and most unaffected nature. In one of the selections there occurred a long and showy soprano solo, in cheap imitation of the Italian style. The young woman who attempted it sang gayly on till the clergyman evidently thought she had enjoyed her fair shair of attention and glory. Accordingly he raised his hand as a signal, and the music ceased.

Besides, late digging gives the weeds and grass a chance to grow, and makes the work of digging still harder. Some think the late fall rains injure the quality of the tubers for eating. #### STOLEN BRANDY.

In September, 1864, about sixty of our company and a like number of Company B, of the Ninteenth Missouri Cavalry, were sent to Glasgow, of that State, where we were joined by six companies of the Forty-third Missouri, and soon after captured by General Price, surrendering to General Clark, now Clark of the National House of Representatives. We were paroled and sent to Benton Barracks, and exchanged December 24 following. We were ordered to Mason City, Missouri, to guard prisoners.

While we were en route, an old doctor got on the cars who had a demijohn of brandy. It was a bad place for that sort of merchandise. Our Captain soon managed to steal the brandy and transfer it to our car, where it was soon transferred to where it would bother the old doctor to get it. This was our Captain's Christmas treat. When the brandy had been all disposed of we could not tell, and did not care, whether we were Union soldiers or what.

About this time a Kansas Major of some regiment, with his colored servant came into our car. Two of our boys at once picked a quarrel with the darky, kicking him out of the car. Of course he complained to his master, and he in turn to our Captain. Now our Captain was not in a very much better condition than his men, and, partly rising, he said: "Well, boys, you may kick him out too," and we at once and promptly then and there proceeded to execute our Captain's commission.

REDUCING HIS LOAD.

At the outbreak of the war the raising of a company would excite the whole population of the county, and cause more stir than getting a regiment ready for the front would have done later, after the poetry of war had been reduced to the coldest of prose.

Well I remember the formation of the company of which I was a member. Nothing was too good for "our boys" then, and we were loaded with sufficient plunder in the shape of woolen socks knitted by mother, warm underclothing, havelocks -do you not all remember the havelocks that nobody wore, but everyone took with him?—and pocket companions, to load an army wagon. Those pocket companions—I think that was the name given to a case containing needless, thread, thimble and all the paraphernalia necessary for mending, darning, sewing on buttons, and about all the other little things that make women a necessity in this worldwere a truly great and wonderful invention. They were treasured with much care for quite a while, and I believe were about the last things thrown away during our first long march; but we might almost have corduroyed the swamp with them the day we reached. As the loads of those in the advance would become too heavy, the articles most easily spared would be thrown away, only to be picked up by the more thrifty of those following, until you would see stragglers at the rear staggering under weight sufficient to break the back of an army mule. One little German comes to mind, who carried a knapsack piled high above his head with a motley assortment of clothing, and several pairs of boots tied on and dangling at his heels. When he had fallen so far in the rear that the provost guard had overtaken him, the officer in command urged him forward, to which he replied: "I shoost can't git up any kvicker; dese glose be too heavy," at the same time making a frantic clutch at a dresscoat some one had shed, thinking a blouse all he wanted to carry. "Throw them away, then, and join your regiment. The army can't wait for you to make a six-mule wagon of yourself."

"Py chiminy! Give oop all dese fine glose! Of I had 'em in Chatham street, my brudder Yawcob sells 'em for feefty-seven tollars." But the officer was inexorable, and with tears in his eyes, Yawcob's brudder commenced unloading, and the first things he proposed leaving were his gun and cartridge-box! As you may well imagine, Captain B. made short work of unloading that fellow, and sent him to his command under guard. But the horrified look with which he left all dem" fine glose' I never shall forget. Major Black, of Sumter, Ga., owned Fact and Fancy on the Farm.

Paper Read by Mrs. Benjamin Kelley at the Whitmore Lake Farmers' Picnic. The summer is past; the harvest is ended. Once more we are met on the banks of this quiet, peaceful lake to celebrate what has grown to be our Annual Harvest Home-aday on which the farmers and their families, in these four counties, come together for a time of recreation and rest, after the toil and heat of the summer, to forget, if possible, all the trials and worriments consequent therefrom.

If any one does need such an outing it certainly is the farmer and his familv. For shall we confess it, though we are proud of our calling, still when the mercury ranged away up among the nineties, we were slightly envious of our town sisters whose household duties are so quickly despatched in the cooler portions of the day.

In the natural order of nature, the hottest season of the year is the farmer's busiest time. It takes the long days of summer, the warm sunshine, the falling shower to mature his crops There is no profession so dependent upon nature. After the crops are matured and ripened then comes the harvest -the ingathering when the fruits of all his toils and care are gathered and stored in our barns and granaries.

Blame us farmer's wives not, if we look forward with a great degree of longing for some such day of pleasure as this. Let us make our little moan. We will feel the better for it. Let us grasp the pleasures that are within our reach-the sunrise on the farm, the play of sunlight and shadow on the hillside or waving fields of grain. There is beauty in them all, if we but take time to notice them.

It always seems to me as though the farmer's year commences with seeding time. We commence then to plan and hope for another year. Harvest, to courage, to others simply discouragement. Sometimes the fault is largely due to ourselves; and then circumstances, over which we have no control, seem to be against us. The last two years the farmers of Michigan (as well as several other states), among other drawbacks, have suffered from severe drouths.

"Barren and tawny now the hillsides lie Like flanks of sleeping lions huge and lean. In all the view there scarcely can be seen A living thing to rest the weary eye. Gone are the April flowers. The brooks are dry That chattered then in every small ravine; And to the slopes that wore a robe of green The phantom grasses cling. Yet ere we sigh That all is mournful, let us well explore The windings of the cañons. Hiding here We find a wealth of beauty—fairy dells Where ferns and flowers grow, and brooklets pour,

For though with summer drouths the world is There are yet nooks where happy springtime lessons most readily learned is the thorough preparation and cultivation of soil, for land thus far has withstood the drouth the best. This dry time will vitalize the soil and return to it some property it needs to nourish and mature the plant root. One of the heaviest crops of wheat ever harvested in Ohio followed two successive years of drouth. Rain will come and revive our drooping pastures, and we may yet enjoy a long, green autumn.

Let us farmers not only be awake in regard to tilling our soil, studying its capabilities and developing all its best points: but also develop ourselves. We are thankful the farmer has awaked, is clothed, and in his right mind. That he has ceased to be a machine, that ate, worked and slept simply that the multitude might be fed; and, shall we say, for it is the truth, nevertheless, having little desire to become anything else.

The citizen who ought to have the largest influence in this republic, is certainly the farmer. As a producer, in getting his livelihood, he adds to the wealth of the nation and supplies the wants of others. In other professions there are and can be drones. There should be a very small proportion of such among farmers. Farmers live such scattered, isolated lives their influence is small. What we need is combination. In union there is strength. Organization is especially difficult among us. We live such active, busy lives, that a large proportion of us have not the time to study into all at the state encampment. the questions of the day, and consequently our influence is not as stong as it might be.

It is twenty-one years since the grange movement was first organized; and it is the oldest agricultural movement in existence in the U.S. There are other and excellent farmers' associations, all of which have been educators and all having for their central on section 21 last week, with the object the elevation of the farmer. Nobly has he responded. We find him proudly taking his station among the foremost in the land. When we first began to have these social times the pleasures of the table seemed to be the paramount idea of enjoyment. Now the appetite gives away to the brain as we see here to-day, one and half hours for dinner and all the long afternoon for intellectual pleasures.

Let us be proud of our calling. Let us impress it upon our children there is no calling more ennobling than that of a farmer. Don't let the drouth or drive our boys from the farm. Let us do our work thoroughly, gather in our sheaves year by year; and as each seed- Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Hewens and their time rolls around look back, see where we made mistakes and try to remedy spent a day in Detroit last week seeing them in the coming year, so that when each summer is ended, the harvest past, our work has not been in vain.

Response From the University.

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN, Department of Medicine and Surgery. ANN ARBOR, Mich., Aug. 22, 1887 To the Editor of The Ypsilantian:

page of your issue of Aug. 18th, headed 'Attempted Grave Robbery," the following pertinent questions are asked, in perfect sincerity and honesty, no doubt, and are deserving of a prompt and satisfactory answer. "Does the honored institution at Ann Arbor procure subjects for dissection in that way?" Does it buy bodies of midnight ghouls without asking where they come from or how they are procured?" It is with intense satisfaction that I am able to answer these questions with a decisive and unqualified no. For more than six years the needs of the medical colleges of this state have been amply supplied with material for dissection under the provisions of the state law. No other source of supply is needed and no bodies have been received at the University since June, '81, that have not been sent here in strict compliance with the Anatomical Act. Whatever may have been the history of previous years, no patronage or encouragement has been afforded to grave robbers by the medical colleges of this state since the Legislature has met this imperative demand of medical education. Truly Yours, W. J. HERDMAN,

Prof. Prac. Anat We are glad indeed that Prof. Herdman is able so positively to declare that no bodies have been received at the University since June, '81, that have not been sent there in strict compliance with the law; and if his reference to the medical colleges of the state em braces all institutions in the state where bodies are used for dissection, then we must suppose that the perpetrators of the recent shocking outrage here intended to reach a market outside the state, which is perhaps not unreason-
